

Talking Cancer (with Benjamin Kheng)

August 10, 2016

Cancer has always been a big looming cloud over my life - when I was 12, my mother succumbed to a 4-year battle with the disease. I saw everything - the sleepless nights, loss of hair, confusion, pain and the fierce battle which she finally relented to. Through it all, she told her story, in hopes of inspiring and helping others.

Cancer isn't the end - there's so much we can do to fight back. For my 50for50sg charity of choice, I'm picking the Singapore Cancer Society for the incredible work they do - education, research, patient care and many more. I'm going to be donating alongside you as well as working closely with the society to come up with initiatives to push back against this terrible disease.
